

We Invite You to Join APA'S DIVISION 20

<http://apadiv20.phhp.ufl.edu>

Michelle F. Fox, APA Editorial and Design Services

DIVISION 20

ADULT DEVELOPMENT & AGING
OF THE
AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

APA members who demonstrate an active interest in life span development and aging are eligible for membership. You will become a member upon our receipt of your online application and a payment of $44 payable to Division 20. Student affiliates who do not want the journal receive their first year of membership free. Student affiliates who want the journal should send $26. After the first year, the student affiliate rate is $12 without the journal and $27 with the journal.

Learn about the division and join by visiting <http://apadiv20.phhp.ufl.edu/join.htm>

— Or —

Contact APA Division 20 Membership Chair

Joe Gaugler, PhD, University of Minnesota

Phone: 612-626-2485

e-mail: gaug0015@umn.edu

... why join Division 20?

Communication

Communicate quickly and share information with representatives in academia, private practice, and governmental service through the division's online network of aging-field psychologists.

Enjoy opportunities for social and professional interactions with members.

Receive subscriptions to Psychology & Aging and Division 20 News.

Participation

Division members regularly serve on the APA Committee on Aging, testify before congressional committees in support of relevant activities (e.g., funding for research on aging), and are active in training and professional issues.

Research

Division representatives regularly engage with funding agencies (e.g., National Institute on Aging) and facilitate dialogue between those agencies and psychologists conducting scientific research.

The division works with the APA Science Directorate and offers diverse convention programming.

Recognition

Division 20 Offers Annual Awards
PhDs: Distinguished Research Achievement Award, the Margret Baltes Doctoral Dissertation Award, and more.

Students: Retirement Research Foundation Student awards at the undergraduate, Master's, and doctoral levels, and more.

Education

The division sponsors continuing education workshops and is officially recognized by APA as an approved sponsor of Continuing Education in Psychology.

Division-developed teaching modules, syllabi, videotapes, lists, and booklets are available to members.

Membership is open to... all APA members who are interested in adult development and aging, including psychologists who provide services to older adults, conduct research on adult development and aging, or are interested in learning more about or teaching life span development and aging.